Enlargement of Fair Park Needed by Growing Hope

Hope is on a boom, the only real boom I've seen here in 43 years—except for the Southwestern Proving Ground, which had a terminal date: The end of the war.

This one is linked to private enterprise and therefore more durable: New shopping centers, new motels, new industries, new people. The Star's circulation proves the statement about new people.

We have just posted in the folio lines at the top of Page One our publisher's affidavit to the Audit Bureau of Circulations for the second and third quarters ending Sept. 30 showing an average paid circulation of 3,702, subject to audit. The report for the last four quarters shows the growth:

Ending Dec. 31, 1971	3,578
Ending March 31, 1972	3,647
Ending June 30	3,685
Ending Sept. 30	3,702

In view of the boom I have been taking a close look at Fair Park the last several weeks. It's the same park Hope had when I came here in 1929 although our town's population has since grown 50 per cent.

It was a thoughtful move when our much smaller town set up the park; now we'll see whether this generation has the foresight and energy to enlarge it. From the Hope citizens I have talked to the favored expansion would be southward to a frontage on W. 10th St.

I believe some of the city officials hit on the same idea just recently. I assume the city government this newspaper will support a Fair Park expansion whatever the cost. If you don't get adequate park space while your city is small you don't get it at all—for the cost of condemning improved property in a larger town is almost prohibitive.

The land south of Fair Park to W. 10th St. is presently unimproved.

It's a golden opportunity for the city government to do something for its growing citizenry—before developers close the door by putting up buildings and making condemnation too costly.

The proper signal from city hall will start the ball rolling.

Worrisome missile is countered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has countered a worrisome antiaircraft missile in Vietnam with a parachute flare device that decoys the heat-seeking weapon away from U.S. jets and helicopters.

The Russian-made Strela missile caused deep concern last spring when North Vietnamese soldiers used it to knock down a number of U.S. and South Vietnamese planes and helicopters.

After a couple of the bazooka-like Strelas were captured in South Vietnam, one of them was flown to the United States for study.

Nothing was said publicly about the countermeasure experts devised until Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamans Jr. mentioned it briefly in a speech last week.

Seamans said, "We were able, in just 18 days, to develop and deploy to the field an infrared suppression kit to counter the heat-seeking Strela missile."

Civilian damage rarely reported

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—A Senior military officer has testified in secret before a Senate panel that the Pentagon and the administration are not "necessarily" informed in specific reports of civilian damage and casualties resulting from United States air strikes in North Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. John W. Pauly, vice director for operations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Subcommittee on Refugees in executive session September 28 that although United States air commanders in Vietnam conduct field

"critiques" on the results of the raids, these studies are not sent to Washington.

The transcript of the executive session hearings, with security deletions imposed by the Defense Department, was made available to The New York Times Sunday by the Subcommittee, which is headed by Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem., Mass.) The hearings were called in an effort to determine the extent of civilian damage in North Vietnam stemming from American raids on military targets there.

Using a Pentagon term of "collateral damage" to describe hits on civilian targets, Pauly said that "our policy has been established that only military targets will be struck, and that civilian casualties be minimized."

"Lucrative targets are often rejected if, as a result of examination, we found that the collateral damage would be substantial," he said.

Pauly explained that "the results of the strikes, once it takes place, are critiqued at all levels in the field. The reconnaissance is put in to identify what damage has been done to the target, and to identify, where possible, any collateral damage that has been done."

"The critiques are done by the commanders and the crews alike with the idea of refining not only our capability of taking out the targets we are after, but likewise to minimize any possible collateral damage," he said.

But under questioning by Kennedy, the general said that "we do not get distribution on the actual critiques. They do not come to our level. It is handled out in the field and the type reports that are kept, I am not sure of at this time."

F111: Good? Or bad?

WASHINGTON (AP) — To its critics, the F111 is a fiasco. To the men who fly it, it's the greatest airplane ever built.

Formerly known as the TFX, for tactical fighter-experimental, the F111 has been steeped in controversy—from its birth 10 years ago to its return to combat earlier this month.

Robert S. McNamara, President John F. Kennedy's secretary of Defense, conceived it as the most sophisticated, flexible, economic airplane yet devised—a single weapons system capable of performing the most divergent missions of both Navy and Air Force.

But in the past decade: After spending more than $300 million, the Navy canceled its version of the F111, concluding it was impractical to use on aircraft carriers.

—In six years of operations, 23 F111s crashed, killing 17 crewmen and leaving eight others missing.

—The Air Force, finding it impractical as a "dogfighter" against enemy MIGs because of its wide turning radius, assigned it primarily as a low-level, all-weather attack bomber.

A "fiasco," declared the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee in a 1970 report on the TFX.

The swing-wing F111s were given a brief combat test in Indochina in 1968. But after 56 missions they were brought home. Of six initially sent over, three crashed, including two which vanished mysteriously without a trace.

A number of mechanical and structural flaws forced the Air Force to ground the planes on a number of occasions since then.

Despite the losses, the Air Force contends that on more than 200,000 hours of flight operations, the F111s have compiled a better safety record than any other American-built supersonic aircraft.

When the U.S. resumed bombing of North Vietnam last spring, the Air Force was anxious to return the planes to combat and prove their worth. Pentagon leaders, after some initial hesitation, ordered two squadrons to Thailand this month.

Within hours of their arrival, three of the aircraft took off on night bombing runs over North Vietnam. One never came back, disappearing without a trace.

The Pentagon went to great pains last week to reaffirm its confidence in the plane.

Big donor misses payments

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) — Four days after Walter T. Duncan wrote out a $300,000 check that helped make him the year's largest listed political donor, a 220-acre parcel of Texas land he owned was sold at a foreclosure auction because he failed to make the payments.

Two months later, as the little-known real estate speculator was handing out another $257,000 in campaign contributions, he was named defendant in a $2.27 million law suit brought partly on behalf of a federal corporation.

These are among the financial, legal and governmental problems faced by the elusive Duncan.

His difficulties were uncovered by The Associated Press in the wake of his massive contributions, first to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's unsuccessful Democratic primary campaign and then to President Nixon's re-election bid.

Duncan, whose only previously recorded national campaign contribution was $60 to Humphrey in 1968, gave $257,000 to the Minnesota senator in May and June.

He was listed in reports to the government Sept. 10 as distributing $257,000, mostly in $5,000 chunks, to dozens of Nixon committees.

Repeated efforts to put questions to Duncan about his contributions, by telephone, in writing and through associates, all failed. Duncan's lawyer said he didn't expect Duncan would respond.

The foreclosure and $2.27 million law suit, both outgrowths of a 1969 land deal, and other aspects of Duncan's affairs have been quietly looked into by the FBI, Internal Revenue Service, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and federal and state grand juries.

He also is or has been involved in a number of civil court actions, chiefly involving alleged nonpayment of debts.

Amid his web of business dealings, Duncan lived in near-anonymity in this east Texas community for 10 years.

Soon after, Duncan sold his $50,000 home here and moved with his wife and son to San Antonio, headquarters for another of his ventures. His home phone and address aren't publicly listed, and relatives won't tell newsmen where he lives.

Duncan, 45, moved into land dealings on his own in the 1960s after supervising Gulf Oil Corp.'s Texas land affairs.

The deals which have drawn the most attention from investigators were begun in April 1969

Yacht captain sees H. Hughes

MIAMI (AP) — Billionaire rechar Howard Hughes had a beard down to his waist and hair flowing over his shoulders when he made a secret trip from the Bahamas to Miami last February, according to the Miami Herald.

His toenails "were so long they curled up," the newspaper quoted a yacht captain as saying.

Capt. Bob Rehak, 55, former skipper of the yacht Cygnus, said in a copyright story published Sunday that he spent 22 hours with Hughes and his entourage on the trip.

Rehak and Donald Lawrence Hout, a 34-year-old Miami houseboat designer, served as dual captains on the yacht.

The mysterious 66-year-old Hughes left Nassau, where he had lived under a veil of secrecy in the posh Britannia Beach Hotel, and reached Miami Beach on Feb. 17 at 4:30 a.m.

U. S. Customs officials confirmed Hughes' arrival in the predawn hours.

Hughes later left on a chartered Eastern Air Lines jet for Managua, Nicaragua—where he is now after a brief sojourn in Vancouver, British Columbia.

"He had this real stringy beard, real thin, and it came down to almost his waist," Rehak said. "His hair was real fine, too, down over his shoulders."

Rehak said Hughes, a private doctor and four aides made the trip. "Three or four of them carried Hughes out of a panel truck on a stretcher, one of those ambulance stretchers that straighten up," Rehak said.

"The Nassau government was starting to snatch his men. They were putting the pressure on him, giving him so many hours to get there

Appaloosa show is set this weekend

Appaloosa horse owners from 10 states will compete in an Appaloosa Cutting Futurity Thursday through Saturday at the Fair Park Coliseum. Held in conjunction with the Futurity, which has a total purse of more than $10,000 added money, will be calf roping and heading-and-healing contests.

All cutting horses will begin the first round of competition at 9 a.m. Thursday; each day's action will continue from 9 a.m. until about 4 p.m. with a break in the action at noon.

Friday will be the second round for all cutting horses and events in roping and heading-and-healing leading to the finals. Beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, the 15 semifinalists in the cutting event will begin working, to be followed by the other two events.

Saturday night, beginning at 7 o'clock, the 10 horses adjudged the top for the Futurity Finals will compete. Also scheduled Saturday night are the matched roping tournament finals and the finals in the heading-and-healing event.

Following the regular performance an open heading-and-healing contest is scheduled, and all ropers have been invited to participate.

Entrants in the Futurity will come from the following states: Arkansas, Michigan, Louisiana, Idaho, Illinois, Ohio, Florida, Kentucky, Missouri, Texas, Utah, Kansas, Oklahoma, California, Alabama, Iowa, Washington, Georgia and New Mexico.

There are more than 75,000 registered Appaloosas in the United States, a breed which has been called "the oldest breed of horse known."

Judge wears jeans

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Judge-elect James R. Holmes says clothes or appearances don't make the man. So he plans to continue riding his motorcycle and wear blue jeans to work when he takes office in January.

"What matters is my being a good judge," said Holmes, 38. "My motorcycle and my clothes don't matter."

Holmes has spent the past two years as a champion of the poor as a Rural Legal Services attorney in Pompano Beach for the Office of Economic Opportunity.

"The two years with Rural Legal Services changed me greatly," said the long-haired Holmes, who won a runoff primary election last week for Broward County Court judge against attorney Robert Kandler.

He previously had served a year as clerk for U.S. District Judge William Mohrman of Miami and said the experience taught him "what I did not want to do."

"I did not want to work for a large law firm and make rich people richer and I did not want to be a federal prosecutor, which are the two most-used avenues by federal law clerks after they finish clerking," he said.

"I suppose when I left the judge I was a typical liberal and then I went through a typical radical stage," said Holmes, who earned $11,000 a year working for the OEO and will make $28,000 annually as a judge.

VN still hold three hamlets

SAIGON (AP) — From 250 to 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong still hold Huong Phuong village and three hamlets 15 to 20 miles north of Saigon today despite heavy air strikes.

The enemy force occupied the hamlets Friday and Huong Phuong on Saturday, cutting Highway 13 between Saigon and a big South Vietnamese military headquarters at Lai Khe, 30 miles north of the capital.

"I don't think anyone regards the threat to Saigon itself as significant because of the relative capabilities of the two sides," said one U.S. source. "The South Vietnamese territorial forces and regular units have good defensive capabilities. The North Vietnamese units are still under strength from previous combat. They are still capable of terror, attacks by fire, sapper attacks and perhaps small infiltration efforts, but the likelihood of any main attack on Saigon is rather remote."

Other American and South Vietnamese officers thought the small-scale attacks might be designed to keep government troops busy while larger enemy forces slipped past to attack such important targets as the big base at Bien Hoa, Saigon and its Tan Son Nhut Air Base.

U.S. B52 bombers attacked troop positions, base camps and infiltration routes on all sides of Saigon. Some of the raids were only four miles east of Huong Phuong and of Highway 13.

Despite the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris, the United States also kept up its heavy air strikes across North Vietnam, and the Communist forces showed no signs of pulling back from battlefields in South Vietnam.

"We are continuing to carry on the same operations as we have all along," said one American source. "We have had no directives to do anything different. There is no indication that any of the 14 North Vietnamese divisions in South Vietnam are pulling out, withdrawing or discontinuing offensive operations."

The B52s dropped nearly 3,000 tons of bombs Sunday and today on munitions stockpiles, troop positions and supply lines near the North Vietnamese cities of Vinh and Dong Hoi and around Saigon.

Candidates hit trail

By R. GREGORY NOKE
Associated Press Writer

President Nixon, Sen. George McGovern and Sargent Shriver have been seeking votes from Columbus Day crowds as the presidential election campaign approaches its final four weeks.

Of the top four candidates, only Vice President Spiro T. Agnew did not campaign Sunday, but he planned to resume campaigning tonight at a rally at Anaheim, Calif.

One Sunday campaigner, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, wife of Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver, won a tug-of-war for a microphone before making herself heard in Baltimore.

President Nixon praised labor leaders and paid tribute to ethnic groups at a Columbus Day dinner sponsored by Italian-American organizations in Washington.

Millions of immigrants have learned, Nixon said, that "America is a country in which a man or woman has an equal chance at the starting line and an equal chance to get to the top."

"Let us be proud to be Americans," he said to cheers. He praised AFL-CIO President George Meany as among labor leaders who "stand up for America."

Nixon's only other announced campaign appearance this week is a quick trip to Atlanta on Thursday.

Sen. McGovern, the Democratic candidate for president, headed for New York City today for the annual Columbus Day parade. He was to go to Detroit later in the day on another coast-to-coast campaign swing.

McGovern taped Sunday a television speech on his proposals for a Vietnam peace. Scheduled for viewing Tuesday night, the speech is said to contain a step-by-step plan for U.S. withdrawal from Indochina.

Shriver participated in a Columbus Day parade in Providence, R.I., Sunday, winning a belated endorsement from state Democratic Chairman Lawrence McGarry.

Shriver also made a reference to the poor showing by the Democratic ticket in most polls. He said that if Columbus had listened to the polls he would never have set out on his journey to the New World because the indications would have been that the world was flat.

Shriver planned to attend a breakfast with labor leaders in Baltimore today and then go to Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Shriver engaged in a brief struggle with a state Democratic party official who tried to take the microphone from her at a Sunday beer party in Baltimore.

The Fair Campaign Practices Committee said today that the 1972 campaign "will be the dirtiest in recent years." It said it has handled "more complaints about dirty politics in the five weeks of the 1972 campaign than in any comparable period in any year since it started keeping statistics."

Keith Rotary guest

After 30 days on the job, the city manager, Gerald Keith, spoke to the Hope Rotary Club on Friday, at a luncheon meeting in the Town and Country. He talked about things that affect Hope or any other community: people, money, needs, and wants. These are factors that control the quality of living.

GERALD KEITH

"It looks like the government's revenue sharing plan will be put to use locally in the near future," he said. Because the Rotary Club has expressed deep interest in the School of Hope, he told of the progress on its new building. Unfortunately, there has been a delay in the grant so work has been held up. Another grant will be used shortly for improvements at Fair Park that will be helpful to many.

In the absence of program chairman Robert LaGrone, Bill Reinhardt introduced the speaker. President Bob Roberts welcomed two Hope High student guests, Sidney Ehler, who was there for the second week, and Sim Walker, who was making his first visit. Other guests were Gil Snow of Texarkana, Lee Luke, James Pilkinton, and Jewell May, Jr.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The procedural committee of the state Criminal Code Revision Commission has suggested numerous changes in Arkansas' criminal code.

The changes are aimed at bringing the state's criminal code into conformity with American Bar Association standards. Changes recommended by the committee will be presented to the state Supreme Court, which is authorized by a 1971 state law to set rules governing criminal proceedings.

Among the major recommendations is that the courts use alternatives to the current bail system. One alternative proposed was use of an inquiry proceeding to decide if a suspect should be released without bail.

The suggestions were outlined Friday by Ed Bethune, the procedural committee chairman, and who is the Republican candidate for state attorney general.

"Our bail system is unsatisfactory," Bethune said, "because it requires us to translate risk of flight into dollars and cents. It therefore discriminates against the poor and, worst of all, becomes a routinized proceeding."

The recommendation would

Sheldon Bush, 77, is dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Prescott Sheldon Bush, former U.S. Senator from Connecticut and the father of George Bush, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is dead at 77.

Bush died Sunday at the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases. He lived in Greenwich, Conn.

A staunch Republican, Bush served in the Senate from 1952 to 1963 and gained a reputation as an authority on government finance and the national economy. He was a confidant of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

As a member of the Senate's Public Works Committee, he helped draft the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1956 which authorized the construction of the national interstate highway system.

Microphone is object of tug-of-war

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eunice Shriver, plunging into a pro-Nixon Democratic gathering, indulged in a brief tug-of-war with a Maryland politician for control of the stage microphone.

She emerged shaken, but confident that "it's their loss."

Sargent Shriver's wife was campaigning Sunday for the McGovern-Shriver Democratic ticket in the Baltimore-Annapolis area when she ventured into a beer party for state Sen. Joseph Staszak.

Although he's a Democrat, Staszak recently announced he is backing President Nixon.

City Councilman Barbara Mikulski, a Democrat of Polish ancestry who often travels with Shriver to smooth the way into ethnic sections, had advised Mrs. Shriver to "tell them to keep an open mind."

As the Shriver party entered the packed, noisy hall, Staszak greeted Miss Mikulski with "Hi, sweetheart," and shook Mrs. Shriver's outstretched hand.

Afterwards, Miss Mikulski said Staszak told her he'd "give them five minutes to remain."

Mrs. Shriver went straight to the stage where, she said, she barely uttered "Good afternoon" before the master of ceremonies, John Jakubik, a state central committeeman,

"grabbed the microphone out of my hand."

Mrs. Shriver said she protested: "I haven't finished yet," and tried to get the microphone back. "I'd like to talk for 30 seconds, so give me back the mike."

Mrs. Shriver said she and Jakubik both gripped the mike, but with a firm tug she finally got her half minute. "I'm from a proud Irish family and I know you're proud of your heritage," she said over the embattled microphone. Her voice was barely audible in the hall.

"I came here to dance, not to listen to this garbage," shouted one man as he lifted a glass.

Mrs. Shriver smiling stiffly, fled to her campaign bus. "I wonder how we stayed alive in there," she sighed, slumping into the seat. "There were 50 places we could have gone today; we didn't have to go in there. They were so rude about it."

Liz Abernathy, Mrs. Shriver's press aide, said she was particularly puzzled at what went on inside the hall because Jakubik himself had invited Mrs. Shriver.

The human eye can distinguish an estimated 500,000 different colors, according to the Society for Visual Care.

make release on money bail the "final but least desirable alternative." In its place, the committee proposed that pre-trial custody be kept to a minimum by allowing police officers to issue citations for misdemeanors rather than to arrest misdemeanor suspects.

Jailers would be authorized to issue citations rather than to detain persons for misdemeanors, after making "certain background inquiries." In felony cases, the jailer would be authorized to release on citation on authority of the prosecuting attorney. Judicial officers would be authorized to issue summonses instead of arrest warrants if arrests would serve no law enforcement purpose.

If money bail was set, the committee recommended that the defendant be allowed to post a cash deposit of 10 percent of the bail instead of the entire amount. If adopted, the suggestions would eliminate the need for bail bondsmen.

Bethune said one of the most "innovative" changes suggested by the committee was the "omnibus hearing."

That would be a meeting of the judge, prosecutor and defense attorney. The lawyers would indicate at that time what motions they planned to file before the court. These motions would be checked off on a check list. As it is now, the motions often come in a scattered manner and delay the start of a trial, while the opposition attorney replies.

The committee said that a provision for legal defense services for indigents was "largely" a financial problem and must be handled by the legislature.

A meeting of District 16 Arkansas Nurses' Association was held at Hempstead County Memorial Hospital Thursday.

The chairman, Mrs. Mary Turner, introduced the speakers, Mrs. Ileta Wakefield, representative of the American Red Cross Disaster Program, stationed in Little Rock, and Mrs. Carolyn Hodges, who is serving the Arkansas Red Cross Blood Program as Director of Blood Program nursing.

Mrs. Wakefield discussed at length the disaster program as it affects a community in assisting families in recovering from catastrophe.

Mrs. Hodges discussed the blood program and those who serve as donors. She stressed the importance of a donor having eaten within four hours of the time of giving blood. She also stated that even though a donor had been turned down previously, he might be accepted on other occasions.

Mrs. Shriver said she and Jakubik both gripped the mike, but with a firm tug she finally got her half minute. "I'm from a proud Irish family and I know you're proud of your heritage," she said over the embattled microphone. Her voice was barely audible in the hall.

"I came here to dance, not to listen to this garbage," shouted one man as he lifted a glass.

Victory EHC met October 4

Mrs. Cecil Smith, President of the Victory Extension Homemakers Club, called the meeting to order Wednesday, October 4 when it met in the home of Mrs. Eugene Collums. The hostess chose Psalm 147:1-5 for the devotion. "Sew, Sew, Sew Your Seams" was sung by the group, and the Homemaker's Prayer was repeated in unison.

The roll call was answered by telling "Quick, tasty ways to prepare breads." The lesson was "Breads Cookery." Leaders elected to complete the slate of officers were: Cultural Arts and Recreation, Eva McKinney; Clothing, Wanselle Petre; Eye-opener, Maxine Rowe; Food and Nutrition, Grace Alford; Home Grounds, Joyce Collums; Home Management, Audrey Hampton; Housing, Renee Willett; Project, Fannie Calhoun.

Mrs. Collums won the Thrift Prize. After the Woman's Creed was repeated, the club adjourned until November 1, when it will meet with Mrs. Dexter Alford. Pumpkin pie, nuts, coffee and cold drinks were served.

Garden Club studies pruning

When the Rose Garden Club met at the home of its president, Mrs. James Black, on Friday, October 6, sinias, dahlias and roses were used as floral decorations. Nine members had a business meeting and then went outside where Mrs. Herbert Dodson demonstrated how to prune roses.

Coffee and cold drinks were served with cherry cake, pineapple cake and Chinese fortune cookies.

HELEN BOTTEL

How Now, Leftist, Rightist?

DEAR HELEN:

DEAR MID:
Says my friend, the political science professor: "During the French Revolution, opposing sides met for a parlay on the palace tennis courts. The radicals chose the left side, royalists the right—and that's how it has been ever since: left for liberation, sometimes violent; right for maintaining the status quo, sometimes oppressively."

"Well, anyway," he adds, "it's a good story, and should do until a better one comes along."

Much better, say I, than White's Political Dictionary version which offers something dull about European Parliamentary seating arrangements extreme conservatives to the far right; extreme liberals to the far left, while less radical government leaders cluster toward the center of the room.

Enough of politics. Next question, please?—H.

DEAR HELEN:
My supposed fiancé and I had a great relationship at first, but the closer we got to each other physically the farther apart mentally we became.

Now, the only time we can talk is in bed. I just don't reach him on any other level. He gets mad, or acts bored at whatever I try to discuss.

Should I cool the bed scene for a while and see what happens?—UNSURE

DEAR UNSURE:
If you cool the bed scene, don't be surprised at the disappearing act which soon follows. What you've had, my friend, is a prologue to marriage. It doesn't sound like a winner, so why not walk out before you're legally trapped?

Couples who can communicate only with their bodies lead very lonely lives.—H.

Reds' Anderson:

'We're gonna win it'

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson talks like all he has to worry about is who will represent the American League in baseball's World Series.

Anderson's Reds used a pair of first-inning two-run doubles by Bobby Tolan and Tony Perez and solid relief pitching by Tom Hall to beat Pittsburgh Sunday 5-3 and even the National League's best-of-5 playoff series at 1-1.

The third game will be played here today.

"I said if we won today (Sunday) we would win it (the National League pennant)," said Anderson, now a picture of confidence. "I still think it will go five games and we'll win it."

The Cincinnati boss added: "I'm not being smart about it or popping off, I just feel that way. We're going home and that gives us an advantage."

Pittsburgh Manager Bill Vardon reacted predictably when informed of Anderson's words. "If they think they're home free, they've got another think coming," snapped the Pirates' skipper.

Anderson's biggest move in Sunday's victory at Pittsburgh was relieving starter Jack Billingham with two outs and runners at first and third in the fifth inning.

Hall pitched 4 1-3 innings of two-hit, one-run baseball to earn the victory.

Yet, if you looked at the statistics, bringing in Hall could have been devastating to the Reds.

During the season, Hall had worked five innings against Pittsburgh and posted an ERA of 10.43. He almost blew a 7-1 lead in one game, and in another one served a three-run homer to Willie Stargell. It looked as if Anderson was feeding the Christians to the lions ... uh Pirates.

Would you believe that the first batter Hall had to face was Stargell?

Anderson said he never even thought about the last time Hall pitched to Stargell. "Tom Hall's record speaks for itself this year," said the Reds' manager. Hall was 10-1 with eight saves and a 2.61 ERA.

"Some managers keep cards on those things," Anderson said. "I ain't smart enough to keep cards."

Hall came in with a 2-0 count on Stargell and worked it to a full count.

Now came the big pitch, a slider down and away for a called strike three. Hall controlled the game the rest of the way.

Stargell said of the strike-three slider, "It might have been a ball, but it was a hell of a pitch. Even if I do swing at it, how the hell do I hit it? I guess my judgment was bad."

Fans to help pick NFL's top rookies

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — (NEA) — National Football League fans have a chance again this year to help pick pro football's rookies of the year.

Newspaper Enterprise Association and the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, are organizing the fans' voting, under the sponsorship of the Wheaties Sports Federation.

Last season, when the fans voted for the first time, New England quarterback Jim Plunkett was named American Conference rookie of the year and Green Bay running back John Brockington was the National Conference selection.

Fan ballots narrow the field to five finalists in each conference and a panel of experts selected by the Hall of Fame and NEA choose the winners, who receive the Bert Bell Memorial Trophy and a 1973 American Motors automobile. The eight other players nominated by the fans get $500 cash awards.

Award presentations will be made in Dallas on Jan. 20, the day before the Pro Bowl game there.

Fans can obtain ballots from specially marked packages of Wheaties breakfast cereal and from supermarket display signs.

Would the real Joe....

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The real Joe Ferguson stood up Saturday night at Fort Worth.

The Joe Ferguson, who lighted up the eyes of pro scouts last fall and had Arkansas fans dreaming of a national championship.

Texas Christian University, a loser to Arkansas for the 14th straight year, saw Ferguson up close — throwing the football in the second half with the accuracy of radar and the velocity of a rifle.

The Razorbacks, trailing the Horned Frogs 13-0, consumed less than nine minutes while scoring touchdowns on four straight possessions. During that stretch, Ferguson completed 13 of 17 passes for 238 yards and all four touchdowns. The drives covered 70, 74, 63 and 86 yards — a total of 263.

Despite the rave notices for his arm, Ferguson made the biggest play of the game with his feet — scrambling for 23 yards on third down and 14 at his own 38 and Arkansas still not on the scoreboard. A piling on penalty against TCU moved the ball to the Frogs' 38. Two plays later, Ferguson threw his first TD pass, 34 yards to Jack Ettinger.

"That run was the turning point for many reasons," said Arkansas Coach Frank Broyles. "It gave the team a tremendous lift. It was all we could do to keep them off the field."

"I would have to say that was this team's and Joe's finest hour," Broyles said. "The defense got the ball for him, the line blocked for him and the receivers caught the ball."

Broyles said Ettinger supplied the second biggest play of the game, a 19-yard reception with Arkansas trailing 13-7 and facing third and 10 at its own 47.

"He made a tremendous leaping catch and held on to the football," Broyles said. "Ferguson's run was first and that catch was second."

Broyles said that although the Razorbacks fell behind, the coaches and players did not lose their confidence.

"We thought we had a chance because we had not really used our game plan, and because they were giving us the deep pass to stop the short pass," Broyles said.

After Ettinger's catch, it took the Razorbacks only four plays to gain the lead. A 17-yard pass to Mike Reppond, a TCU penalty, an incomplete pass and then an eight-yard bullet to Reppond. Mike Kirkland's kick made it 14-13 with 14:01 left in the game.

TCU ran five plays and punted, and Arkansas could not afford to play conservatively. Three running plays gained a first down and then Ferguson hooked up with Jim Hodge for 47 yards, and then 11 yards for the score.

"This is the third week in a row that we've come from behind," Broyles said. "That should help you down the line."

It showed that you can come from behind."

For TCU, Arkansas went to a split backfield much of the time, using Jon Richardson and Dickey Morton as running backs.

"Monday I called Jon in and told him that we would have to throw the ball more," Broyles said. "He's an excellent receiver and his only concern was blocking the defensive ends. I told him 'You block the roll block as well as any back we've had in a long time, so use it.' He tried it in practice and the defensive ends toppled over like a window shade rolls up."

Campaneris is out for rest of series

DETROIT (AP) — The Oakland A's Bert "Campy" Campaneris, focus of a near brawl in Sunday's playoff game between Oakland and Detroit, is "definitely out for the rest of the playoffs," says A's manager Dick Williams.

Williams said early today that Campaneris, struck on the ankle by a pitch thrown by Tiger pitcher Lerrin LaGrow in the seventh inning, is returning to Oakland "as soon as possible" for treatment of the ankle.

The little shortstop, who collected three hits and scored two runs in the A's 5-0 victory, touched off a near brawl when he flipped his bat in LaGrow's direction after being struck.

Players from both teams streamed out onto the field and Tiger manager Billy Martin had to be restrained by three umpires.

The bat sailed harmlessly over LaGrow's head but both players were ejected and American League President Joe Cronin has said he will investigate the incident.

Williams said Campaneris will be replaced by Dal Maxvill and Oakland's batting lineup will be shifted but "I'm not sure yet exactly how I'll do it."

Williams said Campaneris accompanied the A's to Detroit but that the swelling of his ankle had worsened since leaving Oakland after Sunday's game.

ASU loses 21-3

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Arkansas State University fell to 2-3 for the season Saturday night when the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga handed the Indians a 21-3 setback.

Quarterback Mickey Brokas delighted the homecoming crowd by directing touchdown drives of 63, 73 and 47 yards and leading UT-Chattanooga to its first victory of the season. The Moccasins are now 1-3.

ASU was held to 234 yards, and two of five pass attempts by the Indians were picked off by an alert UTC secondary.

The Indians managed their only score of the contest in the second quarter when sophomore Joe Duren, who was wide on two other tries, kicked a 40-yard field goal.

UTC tailback Pete James scored in the first period on a one-yard plunge.

Brokas fired a 29-yarder to Vince Stafford in the end zone for the Mocs' second TD in the next period.

Country House Of God

They wait for Sunday all week.

And when Sunday comes, they gather together to free their souls in a woodframe country House of God.

They are neighbors by miles, not city blocks. Yet they congregate like members of a family and, in spirit, they are.

Everything they do is warm, simple and real.

No bells call them to worship, but they'll all be there on time, their hymns will ring out in harmony. No programs, pews, carpets or stained glass. The pews are benches, and yellow green sunlight plays through the old, clear glass windows on to the hardwood floor.

Down-to-earth, no-doze preachin' that can rattle the ceiling like thunder or shake the walls with laughter is written into the sermons they hear. "It's preachin' you can take home with you . . . just makes good sense to live by."

Pictured on this page is the congregation of the Antioch Primitive Baptist Church of Buna, Tex., whose pastor is the Rev. Elmo Withers. The 90-year-old, one-room church has been put forward for recognition as a state historical landmark.

Superports are expected to be advocated by FMA soon

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Maritime Administration soon is expected to announce that offshore docking facilities—superports—are the best way for the United States to import the oil it needs to stave off an energy crisis.

Top priority, according to a preliminary report, will be given to a site off Delaware—near the oil-hungry refineries of the East Coast that depend on foreign crude-oil for more than 50 per cent of their production.

But the final report also is expected to recommend a site somewhere off the Gulf Coast.

And it could arouse environmentalists, who earlier were instrumental in getting Delaware to ban a deep-water transfer facility in Delaware Bay.

The maritime report will not settle the controversy. Reports also are being prepared by the Corps of Engineers, the Council on Environmental Quality, and by several states that are fighting for the facility.

A Maritime Administration spokesman says the White House probably will make the final decision on whether a superport should be built and where.

The superport would either float or sit on tall stilts in at least 100 feet of water and would be located from 3 to 50 miles offshore. The huge facility would handle the large ocean-going supertankers that cannot dock in most relatively shallow U.S. harbors. The advantage of the huge tankers is economical. The Maritime Administration's preliminary report said the cost of shipping oil from the Persian Gulf to the United States—a 24,000-mile round trip—would drop from $9.93 per ton in conventional ships to $7.27 per ton in the supertankers.

The figures are based on a superport connected by pipelines to onshore storage tanks and doing 200 million tons of business a year.

The National Petroleum Council says the amount of oil imported by the United States is expected to rise from 3 million barrels per day in 1970 to 15 million barrels by 1985. Thus, superport backers contend, the need for a more economical way of shipping oil is great.

Studies done by several states indicate a superport would cost anywhere from $350 million upward—depending on whether it also was equipped to handle solid or containerized cargo.

Most backers feel it quickly would pay for itself. And several oil and pipeline companies have indicated they might be willing to foot the bill. Environmental concerns also complicate the problem. But superport backers say floating skirts that would surround the supertankers while they unload would prevent any oil spills. And they claim an oil spill on the open seas is not nearly as devastating as a spill in a harbor.

There are several superport designs but the one gaining the most favor resembles a giant octopus. The body would be a pumping station connected by underwater pipelines to shore storage tanks.

New evidence about child killers in doctor's report

CHICAGO (AP) — An Ohio doctor reports new evidence about children who kill infants because they are jealous of them.

Dr. Lester Abelson of the Case Western Reserve University school of medicine in Cleveland took note of five such cases which came to the attention of the Cuyahoga (Ohio) County coroner's office in a 3½-year period.

Writing in the Oct. 9 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Abelson said the victims ranged in age from 7 weeks to 8 months.

Their aggressors, ranging from 2½ to 8 years of age, were a young aunt, the son of a baby-sitter, a cousin, sons of a neighbor, and a brother.

All of the babies died of head injuries resulting from being hit with a blunt instrument or dropped on the floor or both. Two of the victims also were bitten by their attackers.

Abelson wrote that "Although the tiny child is motivated to kill because killing represents the most thorough form of retaliation he knows and because it implies the complete removal of the unwanted person, it is paradoxical that small children either cannot grasp or have extreme difficulty in coping with the concept of the permanence of death."

He said it is probable that in many instances "the first blow is the result of the child's deep seated impulse" while the following blows or other injuries "either then continue blindly or represent an attempt to quiet the victim."

"This study indicates unmistakably that the frailty of the infant renders him mortally vulnerable to injuries inflicted by preschool children and provides yet additional examples of how childish jealousy can terminate in tragedy."

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Hiatal hernia is fairly common

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb—First, I want you to know I read your column every day and wouldn't miss it unless I had to. So I'm giving you roses while you live. I am a woman 65 years old and have all the old age pains but try to understand that we are going to have them too. My trouble is a hiatal hernia which I have had for many years. The doctor says there is nothing he can do (no surgery), that I'll just have to live with it.

I take antacids all the time and hurt an awful lot. My doctor says "watch what you eat and take antacids."

I sleep with my bed on blocks and elevated high in order to sleep. Can you tell me what causes these hernias and am I doing all I can do for comfort. I have to leave off so many things that I would love to eat. If I could have surgery I'd be willing to go through that if it would hold and do any good. I wish you'd tell me what to do if you have any other answers. Do most of these hernias become cancerous? Dear Reader—Hiatal hernias are fairly common, particularly as a person grows older. Basically, what happens is that the hole in the diaphragm where the esophagus passes through to join the stomach is too large, and it allows a portion of the stomach to slip through the diaphragm into the chest. The normal closure mechanism that closes the stomach opening is faulty, and the acid contents are squirted back into the lower part of the esophagus causing burning and pain.

Keeping your bed elevated is important. Lying flat at any time should be avoided to prevent the stomach contents from running back into the esophagus. You should avoid bending over to pull weeds, bending over to tie your shoes, pick up clothes, or any head down positions.

A second way to help prevent difficulties is not to overeat and preferably to have the stomach empty before you lie down. This means eating numerous small meals, perhaps five or six a day and avoiding any large meals. It takes at least an hour for the stomach to empty so you shouldn't eat anything for at least an hour and preferably two or three hours, before lying down.

Fatty foods are retained by the stomach longer. Thus if you have a fatty meal, it should be in the middle of the day to allow four or five hours to allow the stomach to completely empty before lying down. Cold foods, such as ice cream, tend to stay in the stomach longer and delay the stomach emptying.

In addition to antacids you should avoid coffee, colas, teas and any drinks or beverages which increase acid pepsin juice by the stomach. This includes avoiding alcohol. You should also avoid smoking cigarettes. Eliminating abdominal obesity will also help decrease the pressure in the abdomen that aggravates the hernia. Girdles and tight belts are not allowed! Operations are possible but they are only indicated in a small number of patients with these problems when there are important complications that need correction. And hiatal hernias don't cause cancer.

with National Bankers Life Insurance Co. of Dallas.

Duncan borrowed $2.4 million and $1.1 million from the company, putting up as security two parcels of land near Austin. Appraisals made on Duncan's behalf and accepted by the insurance company were five times prices actually paid for the land or valuations later made by Texas state insurance examiners.

Little more than a year later, Duncan renegotiated the $2.4 million loan upward to $2.6 million and National Bankers Life sold a half-interest in the note to Sherpstown State Bank of Houston.

In January 1971, National Bankers Life and the Sherpstown bank were named in a stock fraud action by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Both went out of business. The resultant scandal toppled the three top Texas Democrats from state office and prompted a variety of legal and investigative proceedings.

Investigators found that Duncan had been the second-largest borrower from National Bankers. The state liquidator sold the $2.6 million note as part of a package to another insurance firm, Union Bankers Life of Dallas.

When Duncan had failed by May 15, 1972, to pay all of the $104,000 interest payment due the previous Dec. 31, Union Bankers launched foreclosure proceedings on the 220 acres of land securing the loan. He had paid $25,000 of the amount due.

The land was sold on the Travis County courthouse steps June 6—four days after Duncan paid out a $200,000 check to a Humphrey fund raiser. The sale price was $800,000—a small fraction of the $4.4 million at which an appraisal submitted in Duncan's behalf three years earlier had valued the property.

Since the $500,000 knocked only a small portion off the $2.6 million Duncan owed on the note, Union Bankers brought suit in state court in August for the remaining $2.1 million plus interest and other costs.

Allison wins the National 500

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison outscored Buddy Baker 5-3 in the final eight laps of the National 500 stock car race Sunday and posted his eighth victory of the season.

Allison in a Chevrolet and Baker in a Dodge finished as the only contenders for the $19,825 first place check after 490 miles of racing. This $123,000 fall classic at Charlotte Motor Speedway had been a routine race most of the way, with five drivers exchanging the lead at times but with Allison and Baker dominating.

ATTEND MEETING—Attending a meeting of the Malvern Senior Citizens Fellowship were: left to right: Mrs. Alice Burris, reporter, Mrs. Eva McKinney, v. pres. Mrs. Dora Worthan, sec.-treasury, from Hope Golden Age Club. Dr. Fred Harrison, of Malvern, a retired Methodist Minister. Mr. J.L. McCarver, President of the Malvern Senior Citizens Club, and Miss Byrd Martin, v.-president of the Malvern club.

18 members of Hope club attend Malvern meeting

Eighteen members of the Golden Age Club were guests of the Malvern Senior Citizens Fellowship on Wednesday, September 27. Paul Henley of the Parks and Recreation Department drove the bus of local people to the Malvern United Methodist Church where the luncheon meeting was held. Zinnias and mums decorated the table where 75 were served a chicken dinner after the Rev. G.W. Hooten had given the invocation. Dr. Fred R. Harrison, a retired minister in the United Methodist Church who had served churches in both Malvern and Hope, was the guest speaker.

After his humorous talk called "Going to the Dogs" in which he traced the history of "man's best friend," it was surmised that people had rather stay with the human race than "go to the dogs." Arthur Honeychurch, minister of music at the church where the meeting was held, and L.Q. Coleman, a retired counselor, entertained musically. Mr. Honeychurch played Paderewski's "Minuet" on the piano and "Erie Canal" on the accordion. He accompanied Mr. Coleman when he led the group in singing a number of songs they had enjoyed years ago.

A special guest was Mrs. Claudia Stinson, widow of the late pastor of the Bethel A.M.E. Church in Malvern. She had expressed a desire to hear Dr. Harrison and reminisce about when they were both in Hope.

The Senior Citizens Fellowship was greatly impressed when Mrs. Eva McKinney, Vice-President of the Golden Age Club of Hope, told of her club's many activities: holiday parties, fishing trips, and out-of-town excursions such as the visit to the Malvern club. The gift of the bus to the Hope club by a local chicken firm was of special interest and importance to everyone. In reply to an invitation to come to Hope, the Malvern group expressed regret that it did not have transportation of that kind.

CLIMER PROPOSES FACE-TO-FACE TALKS

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Jerome Climer, Republican nominee for secretary of state, has challenged incumbent Kelly Bryant to meet him face-to-face to talk about issues in the race.

At a news conference here Saturday, Climer said: "The voters want to know why printing costs taxpayers so much, why contracts are awarded frequently to high bidders instead of low bidders. They want to know why the state Capitol has no tours on weekends even after the legislature spent $30,000 for this purpose. They want to know why supplies like typewriter ribbons cost the state more than they cost private businesses. They want to know why our state records are burned."

Climer said that he felt "thousands upon thousands of dollars" were being wasted by the secretary of state's office and people have a right to hear their questions answered.

Business mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The jobless rate remained at 5.5 percent in September, a level that drew praise from the President's advisers and criticism from labor leaders. Neither is the best response; understanding is what is needed.

In the context of the past 15 or 20 years, that percentage is neither high nor low, which leads to the presumption that there might be a reason for the rate sticking in that area. And there is.

The story of jobs in the American economy is not an isolated one, because if you speak of jobs you automatically speak also of prices. There is a delicate nip-and-tuck game between them, and it never ends.

Simplified, there is a tendency of prices to rise as the unemployment rate is pushed lower, mainly because the least productive skills are called into use, as are the least desirable units of plant and equipment.

The loss of efficiency is made up, therefore, in higher prices. The seller's unit costs are higher, and so he attempts to recover those extra costs through higher price tags.

The question of when a jobless rate is satisfactory really never can be answered. So long as people are forced onto welfare because they cannot sell their skills, minor as they are, the situation is unsatisfactory.

No economist has conclusively demonstrated to date how low the rate can be pushed without starting the inflation fires again. And so, a rate of 5 or 5.5 per cent is high or low depending largely upon a point of view.

There is no disagreement, however, that the U.S. federal government is committed to probing into this unknown area. It is committed to do so by law, the Employment Act of 1946, which calls for maximum use of the nation's assets.

It means that the nation is committed to maximum growth of its economy—to ever-greater production, jobs, standards of living; to a red hot economy, in other words. But there is a limitation imposed by that act that prevents the country from burning the candle at both ends. If the attempt to push the economy forward results in inflation, then a compromise must be called.

It means that full employment is not a specific percentage of the labor force, but is instead a percentage of the labor force in relation to the rate of inflation.

Boyleing it down

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Alligators don't have to worry about getting false teeth. Some members of the alligator family grow as many as 40 sets of teeth in a lifetime.

The auto has become man's worst enemy — except for man himself. Of America's 114 million drivers, one in five was involved in a car accident last year, 54,700 were killed and five million were injured.

Spectacles weren't introduced until around the dawn of the 14th century. Until then millions of short-sighted people throughout the world lived out their lives without ever really seeing a mountain, a cloud or the stars.

One of the myths about sex most people used to believe — and many still do — is that food containing saltpeter will rob both men and women of sexual desire. It doesn't.

You may have trouble finding your identity, but you can be pretty sure of one thing: You are different from everyone else on earth. Except for identical twins, who do have the same mixture of genes, since they both come from a single fertilized egg, your chance of being exactly like any other human being is infinitesimally small. The odds against it can be expressed only by the digit one followed by 9,301 zeros. The Good Old Days: In Montgomery Ward & Co.'s original catalogue in 1872 there were a few of the prices quoted: six pairs of Army wool socks, $1; a set of 12 white-handled knives and forks, $1; a six-gallon leg of bourbon whiskey, $1.70.

Postpone it: If you are planning to try to swim the English Channel, better wait now until next year. Of more than 1,400 swimmers who attempted this feat, fewer than 200 have succeeded since Matthew Webb first conquered the Channel in 1875. Strong tides and the cold, choppy waters defeated more than 1,200 swimmers.

Belittled sage: Confucius, long revered by the Chinese as the wisest of their wise men, is now officially in disfavor in Red China. Authorities feel his teachings tend to undermine authoritarianism because they stress the ethical responsibilities of individuals. But the books of Confucius, burned in 213 B.C., by an earlier short-lived dictatorship, survived to become the basis of Chinese education for more than 2,000 years.

Worth remembering: "All you can do about children these days is to have them." It was Samuel Butler who observed, "A hen is just an egg's way of making another egg."

The 'Hart' of McGovern's campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — George McGovern's campaign manager says the Democratic presidential nominee isn't banking on only the big states for an electoral college victory, but he concedes that's where the prize lies.

Gary Hart said in an interview that although McGovern is running 28 percentage points behind President Nixon in the major polls, there are a number of states where the margin is closer than that.

Hart said the states where McGovern is running well "are more than a sufficient number of states to constitute an electoral college majority."

Here is the interview: Q. Senator McGovern trails President Nixon by 28 points in the polls. How do you expect to overcome this deficit by Nov. 7?

A. First, I think we obviously have to say a word or two about the polls themselves. I think no candidate has received the nomination of the majority party of the country when he went into the primaries at some 3 per cent in those polls. So I think we have precedent for overcoming the long odds and in fact breaking precedent.

Our feeling has always been that we're running further behind in some parts of the country than in others and that there are more than a sufficient number of states to constitute an electoral college majority where that lead is within the realm of being closed. Certainly no greater than that which Hubert Humphrey faced in 1968 at this point in those states.

Q. Are McGovern's best chances, then, for an electoral college victory while perhaps losing the popular vote majority?

A. No. I think we'll win the majority vote. Any other speculation is merely that. There's no question in my mind that we'll win a majority of the votes.

Q. You nevertheless seem to be concentrating your campaign in say 10-15 states.

A. Oh no. We're campaigning in many more states than that.

Q. But the facts are that he (McGovern) has been spending an overwhelming amount of time in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey and New York.

A. Well, that's right. But the campaign consists of other things besides the candidate's time. Your media programs, your organizational efforts, your allocation of staff and other resources. I think the bare minimum of states that you can carry and win with an electoral majority is 14 or 15. If you use the term concentrating, I think we're concentrating in 25 to 30 states.

Q. You have predicted McGovern would be 5-10 points behind Nixon in the polls by Oct. 5. Yet the latest poll showed McGovern trailing by 28.

A. No. I predicted a 10-2 point lag for polls taken Oct. 5. And we haven't seen those polls yet.

Q. Some of the more diagnostic polls indicate he lost ground because of the credibility issue. How much of this do you think is attributable to the Eagleton affair and will he ever be able to regain the image he had earlier?

A. I think we will, and, to a large degree, we have. The so-called credibility issue we talked about all through 1971 and into 1972 had to do with confidence in leadership and in government. That was one of the main campaign themes that we emphasized throughout the nomination race and it stood us in good stead.

The facts are that in the post-convention period, Sen.

McGovern entered that period not very well known at all. It is hard to build up massive personal credibility when people don't know much about you or who you are. So I think that any problems you face, including those of the selection of a running mate, tend to interfere with your efforts to get yourself better known and therefore, since you are better known and you are the kind of person George McGovern is, by becoming better known you become much more believable.

All the difficulties surrounding the vice presidency hampered that, on both levels. One of getting better known and two, by virtue of becoming better known getting people to believe in you as opposed to the administration. I think we always felt and still do that this administration has suffered from a severe credibility gap and what people are looking for was an alternative.

Q. Sen. McGovern is still widely perceived, according to some polls, as an extremist. What plans do you have to remove this image?

A. I disagree with your conclusion. I don't think that is an image that's sticking. And even if it is to a degree, which I don't think, I'm surprised that you've read the polls this way because we certainly haven't.

George McGovern off on another swing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern sets off today on another coast-to-coast campaign swing after taping a television speech on Vietnam that aides say could prove more important to his underdog presidential campaign than his daily speechmaking.

McGovern planned to fly to New York in midmorning for the annual Columbus Day parade, a traditional campaign stop, before going on to Detroit for more appearances later in the day.

Before his scheduled return to Washington a week from Friday, the Democratic presidential nominee will have made another round of the nation's eight largest states that constitute the base he needs to overhaul President Nixon by Nov. 7.

With funds beginning to come in at a quicker pace, McGovern hopes to make increasing use of television in the last four weeks of the campaign, starting with Tuesday night's speech outlining his step-by-step plans for withdrawal from Indochina.

He said $1.4 million came into the campaign treasury last week.

To spread interest in that speech, an array of Democratic senators, congressmen, governors and mayors is speaking about Vietnam today in every major U.S. city to mark the fourth anniversary of Nixon's 1968 statement that "those who have had a chance for four years and could not produce peace should not be given another chance."

McGovern taped Sunday the half-hour speech he has been working for the past week.

The speech is scheduled for showing at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, 6:30 in the Central Time Zone only on CBS stations.

The 12-day campaign swing will include a weekend visit to California, McGovern's fourth trip there since Labor Day, and a two-day visit early next week to Texas, which the candidate's advisers still think he has a chance to carry despite polls showing him far behind there.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The giant panda inhabits the bamboo forests of eastern Tibet and southwestern China, living at altitudes between 6,000 and 14,000 feet. The World Almanac notes that once it was thought to subsist solely on bamboo shoots, but it is now known to also feed on small animals and fishes.

SHIP SALVAGED
WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) - Four years after the ferry Wahine sank in Wellington Harbor with 51 dead, divers are still clearing the submerged wreck from the shipping channel.
Carrying 739 passengers and crew, the near-new ship foundered in a violent storm April 10, 1968, only a few hundred yards from suburban harborside homes.
Plans to refloat the vessel with plastic foam and re-sink it at sea were abandoned when a second fierce storm broke the wreck in two.
Working in 60 feet of water, divers have salvaged 5,000 tons of steel as scrap metal.
The remaining 1,500 tons, including heavy engine machinery, will not be cleared before early 1973.

Oswald: "North decided to compete to three spades and East went on to the four hearts he had wanted to bid from the start."

Jim: "South passed. He had good defense against hearts but nothing that looked like a double. This put it right up to North. North knew his partner wouldn't be hurt at four spades and went to four spades."

Oswald: "This threw the ball back to East. Was North bidding four spades to make or as a save? Finally, East decided North was saving but East did not double. He was going to be satisfied to beat the hand one trick undoubled which is just what he did."

Temptation for Tots

Planks and sandpiles. Mud and sawdust. Nooks and crannies. Such are the ingredients that make a house under construction so alluring to young children.

But if there is allure, there is danger too. If a child is injured while exploring an unfinished house, is the builder legally liable?

The builder will point out, rightly, that the child is a trespasser. Nonetheless, most courts will overlook this factor if the builder should reasonably have foreseen the child's visit. At least, they will examine the specific circumstances to see whether the builder can fairly be blamed.

A 10-year-old boy climbed the steps of an unfinished house, wandered around the second floor, and tumbled through a hole in the flooring. Suit was brought on the boy's behalf against the builder, on the theory that he should have erected a barricade at the foot of the stairway.

But a court said that would have interfered unduly with the construction work. Denying the boy's claim, the court said:

"Any barricade of sufficient size to keep children from going up the stairs would destroy the very purpose for which the stairs were built."

But in another case, involving a similar accident, the house was much nearer to completion. There was already a door at the foot of the steps that could easily have been locked—but wasn't. When preventing accidents was so simple, said the court, the builder should indeed bear responsibility for what happened.

Another factor is the age of the child. In most successful claims, the victim has been under 12, relatively inexperienced in coping with danger. The older the child, the lighter the burden on the builder. Thus:

A 13-year-old boy fell from a scaffolding left overnight by a construction crew. Was the builder liable? A court said no, because this kind of accident was too improbable to have been foreseen. The judge said that as a rule, a child old enough to climb scaffolding is also old enough to recognize the risk of falling.

MAIL THE CHILI PEPPER SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - The chili pepper and the frijole bean are by law the official state vegetables of New Mexico.

In an August proclamation, Gov. Bruce King said that chili "has contributed its extensive source of vitamins A and C to the longevity of the life of the inhabitants of the Land of Enchantment."

"It has contributed," the governor's Chili Week proclamation said, "to the picturesque of our countryside as it dries upon the roofs of adobe houses with backdrops of mountainous splendor."

Newspaper week:

Views of the press

EDITORS NOTE: Wendell Philippi is president of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association and the following article, containing some of his views of the press today, was written in observance of Newspaper Week, Oct. 8-14.

By WENDELL PHILIPPI
Managing Editor, The Indianapolis News

The newspaper is the most modern and complete textbook available to students of all ages. It is a textbook with a new edition coming out daily.

It contains information on government, economics, sociology, biology, criminology, and other news of the world, the nation, local news and a variety of features and entertainment found nowhere else in any other product. As a bonus it includes advertising information which helps the reader save money.

Newspaper Week 1972, October 8-14, is an appropriate time to bring the reader up to date on some thoughts and observations of the profession. The last day (Saturday, Oct. 14) is International Newspaper Carrier Day and so a well-deserved salute is in order to the carrier who is the final but a most important link in our chain of providing the reader with his modern textbook. And don't forget the newsstand dealer who is there to provide you with a newspaper.

The Associated Press services 1,260 daily newspaper members in the United States and hundreds of newspaper subscribers around the world. Any member paper may belong to the Associated Press Managing Editors Association and most in the United States and Canada do. APME is an advisory group for the more than 3,300 AP executives, reporters, editors and technicians. They regularly send story ideas to supplement the AP news report. The AP is entitled to use stories and pictures which appear in member newspapers daily and share them with other papers. Many papers are cited by APME each year for sharing stories and pictures sometimes even before they have had a chance to print the information gathered by their staffs.

AP also provides news and-or pictures to about 3,400 radio and television stations in this country and many more abroad. In turn these electronic outlets, including the major U.S. networks, share their information with the entire AP membership.

The backbone of the AP consists of reporters who roam the nation and the world in the pursuit of news. They also spend a lot of time explaining to the reader what is happening in the world, under the banner of analysis and commentary. But in all of this report the AP people are objective in their writing. They are neither liberals nor conservatives in their reporting. They cover the beats around the clock in an effort to give the reader an objective, unbiased report of daily happenings.

Newspapers work hard to be fair in news presentation. Nearly every story has at least two sides to it, but trying to get all sides is not easy. Obviously someone accused of something is reluctant to talk. But there is an axiom that the sooner the truth is out the sooner the story is forgotten. People who make news should remember this. There is no substitute for telling the truth without delay. Otherwise the reader, the reporter and the editor are suspicious and sooner or later the truth will come out.

Newspapers are often accused of printing only the bad news of the day. If you believe that, do two things:

1. Try to recall some good news story you have just read in your newspaper.

2. If you can't recall any, look over the next issue of your paper for good news stories. They are there. Newspapers are full of good things which people do: such as, help for the underprivileged, crusades and fund-raising drives for the unfortunate, reading classes for the slow learners, and one to one counseling. However, in the rush of news events it is often easy to overlook these stories.

This is not to say that editors and reporters should not try harder to find more good news stories to offer readers.

Despite the repeated charge that headlines on sensational stories such as rapes and murders sell newspapers, it is not true. Ask any circulation manager and he can show you the figures. National disasters obviously do sell newspapers on the street, but don't blame newspapers for these events. Newspapers do not cause or create assassinations, Lt. William Calley and atrocities of war, nerve gas slayings of sheep in Utah, embezzlements, or earthquakes. Newspapers only report them.

Many times you hear the comment that newspapers reflect the personal ideas of the publisher. The editorial page does and it should. Newspapers are constantly under attack by government officials. And by readers who do not agree with our editorial pages. This is their perfect right. The rest of the news which is collected and written by thousands of national, state, worldwide and local reporters is presented in an objective manner which offers the reader a variety of information to allow him to make up his own mind. In other words, the publisher takes one page of a daily newspaper and gives you the remainder of the paper for news and advertising. A better bargain is hard to find.

Some people say that one-owner newspaper cities have a monopoly on news. Just ask the city editor of any such newspaper his opinion of this charge. He is fighting for stories with television, radio and the neighboring newspaper day after day. He knows there is competition and of utmost intensity.

Newspapers today are concerned about the fact that many of our young people do not read a daily newspaper. Neither do some of their parents. Both generations have been mesmerized by television. This spoon-fed approach to a reading and understanding of the news is disturbing. The right to read and understand is fundamental to the American way of life.

Under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, freedom of the press is guaranteed. But this freedom is not confined to newspapers. It applies to all the people. Anyone can write what he thinks and believes so long as it is not libelous or obscene in the eyes of the law.

The problem of press freedom is the business of everybody in 1972. You, the readers, have helped us many times in the past. Your help now is even more important to aid us in solving problems and better informing the American public.

People in the News

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has something new: "Republican golf balls—guaranteed to go right down the middle."

Agnew, clad in purple shirt, lavender pants and white shoes, was joined for a round of golf Sunday at the El Dorado course by comedians Bob Hope, Jack Benny and his weekend host, Frank Sinatra.

Joking in the 90-degree desert sun, Agnew belted several accurate practice shots and said "I think I'll go home" while he was ahead.

Benny replied that "at my age, if I make the tee I'm happy."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former astronaut Scott Carpenter has married Maria Roach, the daughter of motion-picture pioneer Hal Roach Sr.

The wedding Saturday took place in the Westwood United Methodist Church.

Carpenter, 47, the second American to go into orbit around the earth, now heads an oceanographic research and development company here. It was his second marriage.

His bride is a free-lance writer for magazines and films.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Cardinal Krol who leaves Tuesday for Poland, the home of his parents, will be the first American Roman Catholic prelate to visit behind the Iron Curtain since World War II.

The 61-year-old cardinal has been invited by church officials to celebrate mass at Auschwitz. The mass will commemorate the first anniversary of the beatification of Father Maximilian M. Kolbe, a priest of the Franciscan Order who was martyred there Aug. 14, 1941.

Father Kolbe volunteered to die in place of a Polish army sergeant.

Kissinger's 'secret' meeting is not so secret

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger scheduled another secret meeting in Paris today with the North Vietnamese, and the future of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu appeared to be the chief issue under discussion.

President Nixon's national security advisor and his top assistant, Maj. Gen. Alexander

M. Haig Jr., met Sunday with Le Duc Tho of the North Vietnamese Politburo and Xuan Thuy, chief of Hanoi's delegation to the Paris peace talks, the White House announced. It was Kissinger's 18th secret meeting with the North Vietnamese.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said another session was planned today. He added there might be a third meeting on Tuesday.

Ziegler refused to disclose what was said at the meeting Sunday. But Associated Press correspondent Gaylord Shaw reported from the White House that there were clear indications the talks were focusing on the future of Thieu, whose resignation is one of the chief Communist demands.

Thieu again rejected the Communist demand Sunday that he quit and make way for a coalition government including the Communists. The White House also has termed news stories that Thieu would resign sheer speculation.

But the belief that Thieu's future was being discussed in Paris was heightened by the presence of Gen. Haig. It was his first appearance at the secret talks, and he returned on Wednesday from talks in Saigon with Thieu and other high-ranking officials.
